So the doctor who tried to warn the public about the virus last year - and was reprimanded instead - has just passed away. My hands are trembling as I type this sentence #liwenliang
So the doctor who tried to warn the public about the virus last year - and was reprimanded instead - has just passed away.

How far can we go? How far? How far??????????!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

We shouldn’t let those who collect firewood for all die in snow storm.

His death reminds me of #liuxiaobo. It was the same heartbroken feeling.

This land under my feet is affectionate and yet unfortunate. You are draining every drop of our patience and every inch of our dignity. I don’t know whether to curse or praise, but I do know that I cannot stop tears from flowing or my heart from breaking as I mention your name.’

And now on Weibo, “wuhan govt owes Dr #liwenliang an apology” is a censored topic.

The worst part: the machine that killed him continues to manipulate his death: his death cannot be announced until “authority”’s approval.
2/6/2020 Ting Microway on Twitter: "So the doctor who tried to warn the public about the virus last year - and was reprimanded instead - has just passed away...."
2/6/2020  Ting Microway on Twitter: "So the doctor who tried to warn the public about the virus last year - and was reprimanded instead - has just passed away...."